PARTNER

Edward O. Pacer is the managing partner in the Chicago office of Peckar & Abramson and co-chair of the White Collar Litigation and Regulatory Enforcement Practice. He is a highly regarded litigation attorney who has tried 32 civil and criminal cases to jury verdict and has tried dozens of cases before the bench. He has also argued before the Illinois Appellate Court nine times. Ed has represented his clients in a wide variety of litigated matters, including business partner disputes, employment discrimination claims, construction-related claims, investment disputes, trust litigation and cases involving fraud and civil RICO claims. Ed also has extensive experience in effectively representing clients in mediation and arbitration and litigation. His broad based civil litigation experience has allowed him to serve as a valuable asset to his clients providing internal policy and practice advice and by aiding clients in assessing and avoiding risk.

During the past six years, a significant portion of Ed's time has been spent conducting highly sensitive and confidential internal investigations and audits for corporate clients who fear that an employee may have failed to adhere to the company's corporate ethics and compliance program and practice by engaging in acts of corporate malfeasance. A majority of Ed's corporate compliance investigations have focused on possible violations of state and federal false claim laws, anti-kickback, corporate bribery, theft and bid rigging prohibitions and failure to adhere to government mandated DBE/MBE/WBE contract requirements on public projects. Ed is experienced at providing senior corporate management with an assessment of the nature and extent of risk a company may face and with providing sound, practical response options in a potential crisis situation. When necessary, Ed represents clients in their dealings with State and Federal prosecutors, the SEC, and also with regulators from a wide variety of enforcement agencies. Ed is also able to draw on his experience to provide clients with advice regarding the sufficiency of their existing compliance policies and practices.

Ed is a former Assistant State's Attorney in Cook County, Illinois, where he spent a significant amount of time assigned to special prosecution and multi-jurisdictional task force units that investigated and prosecuted organized criminal enterprises. Ed is a former partner at the firm of Williams Montgomery & John and on of the four founding partners of the Harrison & Held law firm. In light of his accomplishments, Ed has been recognized as a Chicago Super Lawyer and a Chicago Top Lawyer.
