Warren E. Friedman has written an article titled

Here's Some Guidance for Construction Contractors About Mitigating Coronavirus Risks

which appeared in the Daily Business Review/Law.com on March 27, 2020.

As work on some construction projects in South Florida has been suspended, it is likely more suspensions will follow. Friedman discusses what contractors can do to avoid losses due to the coronavirus, mitigate the impacts, and prepare for what's to come. Finding relevant contract terms, providing clear and compliant notice, paying special attention to suspension and termination clauses, documenting cost and schedule impacts, considering insurance, and assessing both prime and subcontracts are among the many topics he focuses on.
