Paul Monte of Peckar & Abramson Speaks at Transportation and Infrastructure Construction Conference

New York, NY- June 26, 2017 – Peckar & Abramson P.C. (P & A)'s Paul Monte, Co-Managing Partner of the firm's New York City office, moderated a panel on Thursday, July 15th at the Commercial Observer's Transportation and Infrastructure Construction Conference entitled Planes, Trains and Urban Infrastructure: A Blueprint for the Regional Transportation Construction Boom. The half-day conference, which took place at The CUNY Graduate Center at 365 5th Avenue in New York, examined the recent construction boom resulting from the need for accessible and upgraded infrastructure in order to modernize the region's transportation networks.

Monte led the second panel of the day on infrastructure development, and facilitated discussions on the regional bridges, tunnels, and the transit construction boom. The panel included Peter Cavaluzzi, Principal and Director at Perkins Eastman; James Ferrara, Vice President at The LiRo Group; Michael Horodniceanu, former President of New York Metropolitan Transportation Authority's Capital Construction Company (MTACC); and Christopher Ward, Senior Vice President and Chief Director, Metro New York at AECOM.

The panel discussion revolved around the challenges panelists face when improving mobility to meet the transportation needs of dense, urban areas. Bigger projects such as the reconstruction of Port Authority Bus Terminal were also explored throughout the panel discussion, specifically the multiple solutions available to improve the current condition of their structures.
