

Brian D. Waller Accepted into Association of Defense Trial Attorneys

NEW YORK, NY. – May 19, 2022 – Peckar & Abramson, P.C. (P&A) is pleased to announce that Brian D. Waller, a partner in the firm’s New York City office, has been accepted into the Association of Defense Trial Attorneys (ADTA). The Association is exclusive, only permitting “one prime member per one million population for each city, town or municipality.”

Kevin J. O’Connor, chair of P&A’s business litigation practice, vice-chair of the firm’s labor and employment practice, and ATDA’s New Jersey State Membership Chair, commented “Brian is an exceptional trial and appellate attorney, whose impactful legal career spans more than 25 years.” He continued, “His acceptance into the ADTA reflects his deep commitment to generating the best possible outcomes for clients. His collaborative approach to problem-solving paired with a stellar ability to mitigate issues makes him a wonderful teammate and very deserving of inclusion in the ADTA.”

About the Association of Defense Trial Attorneys

The ADTA is comprised of members of the defense trial bar in the United States, Puerto Rico, Canada, UK, and Ireland. The Association states it “is a select group of diverse and experienced civil defense trial attorneys whose mission is to improve their practices through collegial relationships, educational programs, and business referral opportunities, while maintaining the highest standards of professionalism and ethics.” Its two main objectives are “to provide an opportunity for the proven successful defense trial attorneys to associate with similarly qualified trial attorneys for professional, social, and business purposes, and to identify the successful defense trial attorney for those persons in search of such an attorney.” The Association’s website can be found at adtalaw.com.

About Brian D. Waller

Brian Waller represents corporations, financial institutions and individuals in the areas of complex commercial litigation, dispute resolution, corporate internal investigations, white-collar criminal defense and regulatory enforcement matters.

Brian’s civil litigation experience encompasses matters involving complex business disputes, construction litigation, products liability, labor law, employment law, insurance coverage, professional liability, and toxic torts.
