Peckar & Abramson, P.C. (P&A) is pleased to announce that senior counsel Brett J. Moritz recently passed the Florida Bar's Certification Exam and is now Board Certified in construction law by The Florida Bar Board of Legal Specialization and Education.

With this prestigious accomplishment, the organization now recognizes Brett as an attorney proficient in legal matters relating to the design and construction of improvements on private and public projects. Of the over 100,000 lawyers in Florida, only about four percent are board-certified in construction law.

According to the Florida Bar, "the process for construction law certification is rigorous and includes practicing construction law for at least five years, showing substantial involvement in construction law, completing 45 hours of approved construction law certification, continuing legal education, peer review, and a written examination."

"We are incredibly proud of Brett for this accomplishment," said Adam P. Handfinger, co-managing partner of the firm's Miami office. "Receiving this certification not only demonstrates his knowledge and dedication to the field, but the firm's commitment to excellence in serving our clients. Brett's deep understanding of construction law will continue to enhance our ability to provide innovative and effective solutions for the complex challenges our clients face."

Brett joins five other P&A attorneys in the Miami office who hold this certification – Jerry Brodsky, Adam Handfinger, Mindy Gentile, Stephen Reisman, and Gary Stein.
